he had used the great influence which he possessed in the district against the candidature of a certain gentleman.

He moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. PARKES thought that when the hon. member attributed such corruption to the Government as the removal of a gentleman from the War Office, the hon. member on the ground stated, he ought to mention the name of the candidate. It was well known from the papers on the table of the House that this gentleman was superseded on the report of a highly respectable body of colonists. A commission was appointed under the great seal of the colony; and the hon. member advised that this gentleman be superseded, and the re-appointment for his being removed from the Commission of the Peace were clearly stated. Whatever the reasons were, however, they were, stated in the report, and they completely cut the ground from under the feet of Hon. gentlemen who tried to make out some other reason for his removal which they had not the fairness to state. The volunteers of gentlemen who had been the friends of this gentleman from childhood also agreed in the propriety of his removal. Special parties were sent out against those Unionists; but out of about twenty parties only three volunteers were left. Only three were accepted, namely, Turner's party, Moore's party, and Carroll's party, which was brutally murdered. Of course the murder of Governor Moore was the cause, as the bodies could not be allowed to remain without interment. The expense of Carroll's party was $86, Turner's $79, Moore's $60, funeral expenses $63, expenses of commissioning non-official members $200, of official members, $160, and incidental expenses $194. An immense territory was ravaged for three years. A successful gang of whitebaiters, three of whom were shot down or brought to justice, and others deported; but he thought there was more to do. Twenty members of Clarke's gang from the time it commenced till the time it was broken up. They rendered life and property so insecure that people dared not travel through the district. The regular police were not strong for a long time (more than two years), and did not succeed in hunting down this party. Then special services were offered on this ground that the volunteers had an intimate knowledge of the district, and of the habits. The expenses of Flynn and his party were already dealt with. The next was that of Carroll, who was supplied as one of the shrewdest, and also most efficient, of this class of officers. But his services were accepted, with a great deal of reluctance, and upon terms made for the purpose of discouraging him. The services of Mr. Turner were offered simply upon the condition that his expenses should be paid. So with the other party, that is, the Government. The Government were anxious, if possible, to find out the authors of Garoll's murder. The inhabitants of this district were opposed, and energetic steps for some inquiry of the kind. The commission collected a mass of information of the greatest possible value for public purposes, but it was improper and cruel to make it public, and it would do little good. The step adopted was approved by public resolutions sanctioned at meetings of the inhabitants. He believed the inquiry was conducted in a very satisfactory manner by men entitled to the confidence of the public, in dealing with the state of crime that then existed, would not have been possible. The expenses of the expense of police, extra parties, and commission were trifling as compared with the injury which the uncontrolled crime was doing to the city. These steps had put down that crime and restored the district to a state of quiet and order. The expense of the special parties was nothing as compared with the expense of the ordinary police, who for a long period failed to break up the gang. He thought then, those expenses would be considered to have been justified.

Mr. S. C. BROWN regretted that Mr. Driver had introduced the name of a gentleman who, as the House was then constituted, was likely to get but little notice. Yet a more honorable man did not live, or one less known.

able to be made the recipient of this commission. He was turned over to the Commissioner of the Treasury, who called upon to defend himself—a practice never introduced into the public offices until it was adopted by the present Colonial Secretary, in this case, the Treasurer, who stood some one behind the scenes. He (Mr. Brown) denied that it was the act of the Government, for advantage was taken of the absence of the Treasurer and the member of the Government to do so, and he believed the Premier would never have given it his sanction. The first word this gentleman (Mr. Hensley) said was, "I have written against him was a letter informing him that his superannuation was issued. The committee was asked to vote this money in the dark. All of this commission was made to make this gentleman their recipient—a gentleman dis-

Mr. JOSEPHINE intended to oppose the motion, because he disapproved of the purpose for which the money was expended. He did not see how the laboring man could be disapproved of the terms under which Carroll was sent out after the bushrangers. His remuneration would depend on his success, and he was quite unprotected. His instructions were most indefinite, and he could occupy his leisure time in various ways inconsistent with his duty. He entered private houses as a spy, and acted as an informer, a decoy, and a betrayer. He and his party neutralized the efforts of the regular police, and they were spies, and they received the reward of spies. They went into people's houses, deceived them, deceived their wives and betrayed them, and then they went against them, and they were killed. These men were sent up by Henry Parkes, not by the Colonial Secretary, and he thought Henry Parkes should pay them. I was sent against granting this sum, and he could not see how the House could pass it. With respect to that portion of the form that related to the British Colonies, I thought it a good deal about Brimwood, and he could assert that the effects of that Colonialism were most injurious. People there were afraid of each other for the Government's defence was taken privately, and they did not know what was sent against them. Mr. Hassall did not know up to the time the expenditure was issued, and he was not to be issued. A more honourable man than Mr. Hassall did not exist, and the letter that he had received from the Colonial Secretary announcing that he had been appointed a most insulting letter. It was not a proper letter to be sent to any man, and the Colonial Secretary had no right to send such a letter. The object of the letter was to crush one individual alone. Mr. Henshall had bitter enemies, who gave evidence against him, and did their best to ruin him. The allegations against him in the report were not based upon any thing that the House knew of. We had no evidence before us, and he was free to tell them that the statement was untrue, and that if Mr. Henshall were allowed to produce evidence in his defence, he could refute all these accusations against himself. It was known that Mr. Henshall was the political opponent of one hon. member of the House, and that he had an enemy in the person of another member, member of the House. He had been told that he had set upon the Bench and adjudicated half a dozen times in cases of unsharshing; had given valuable information to the police many times; had done good service to the Government. He had perhaps been occasionally a little indiscreet in his language, but nothing more. He had not even been allowed to give evidence for himself, though he could assert that the allegations of the report were false. Mr. Russell ought to be reinstated in the Commission of the Peace, the sole result of the expenditure was the deprivation of Mr. Russell of his office, he thought the House should negative the vote.

was refused employment by the late Mr. Uhl, because Cassius M. Leslie reported that he had been discharged from the police force for drunkenness. He had been discharged from Mr. Uhl himself. The most damning passage in the report against Mr. Hassall could be discovered easily. Tommy Blake was at large for some time, and Mr. Leslie was the man who caught that outlaw and delivered him up to the police. Some of the horses that Carroll and Harry used at the time of the shooting belonged to Mr. Hassall. It was a shame that that gentleman was not allowed an opportunity of rebutting the charges made against him. The Colonial Express had asked for the names of those parties who were suspected to have influenced the proceedings of the committee with regard to the Hassall.

right to demand the names of those persons, how much more right had Mr. Hassall to know the names of those who had reviled him, and who had been the cause of his being done thus. It was to be hoped that when the hon. member required defense, he would have persons willing to stand up for him and protect him from the abuse to which he was reviled against Mr. Hassall. At the next election, perhaps, Mr. Hassall would himself be present in the House, and would then be able to insist that he should be allowed to clear himself of these aspersions. The whole country, or at all events a large number of Mr. Hassall's friends, thought he had been unjustly ill-treated, and that Mr. Hassall been singled out? Because he had made himself obnoxious to the hon. gentleman opposite and to his friends, he should be expected to think of his friends.

anything that was before the House it was difficult to come to any other conclusion. The issue would come before the committee of some hon. gentleman, and he would demand an explanation at their hands for the indignity they had cast upon Mr. Inassell.

Mr. MARTIN said hon. gentlemen opposite appeared to be grossly misinformed in regard to his connection with the removal of Mr. Inassell from the commission of the peace. He was done with his entire concurrence. He was never consulted by his hon. friend behind him. He certainly did not read the evidence; but it was stated to him by his hon. colleague, and he had no reason to doubt his statements, that Mr. Inassell, in giving evidence before the Commission, stated that he had abstained from acting in a particular case, where he was present.

were concerned, because he was afraid." [Two of three hon. members.] "He denies it." Mark [testament] was taken down by the Commissioners, and that statement Mr. Hassall was removed from the Commission of the Peace. [Mr. Martin] would take the same course again if the evidence became established, that a man who was afraid to exercise his functions was not fit to remain in the Commission of the Peace. He joined with his colleagues in this resolution, and he had early hostility to Mr. Hassall. Mr. Hassall was an old friend of his, and had assisted him in elections more than once. [Mr. Hassall] was not averse to help him, and had spent not days but weeks endeavouring to procure support for him. But that would not prevent [Mr. Martin] from doing his duty.

duty in a matter of this kind. He had not read the evidence taken by the Commission, but had taken the statement made to him by regard to Mr. Fossell's admission. [Mr. BROWN: It is denied most positively.] It was a matter which could be easily settled—[Mr.

At intensely exciting times, slight events photo-graph themselves upon the memory permanently. Six years have passed since my first boat race, yet I can see the boatmen, in their white uniforms, at the stake-boat holding a flag in one hand, and performing a sort of compound dance, resembling somewhat an Indian war-dance, and partaking also, in the excitement of the race, of all the exuberance of his unbounded delight at our being ahead.

Also I remember that when we were carrying in the twelfth, after the race, one of the crew began to recite:

Take her up tenderly,
Lift her with care;
Fashioned so slender,
Young and so fair;
and continued his jubilant spouting until he fell overboard and got lost.

But the funniest occurrence appertaining to this race is this: the coxswain of the other boat was placed at the stern, and he afterwards avowed that as we slipped past him he, by his misadventure, lost the position of the stern "griping and tearing," at his flagging crew in our round-set English, non-judicial chaos. "This is a lie," said he, and he was right, for his answer was a denial. He added, however, a gratuitous addendum (which rather threw an air of doubt over the whole matter) that he had seen the boatmen of the

I might go on to relate (but I will not) how the beaten men were abused by their club—how they were made to experience all the humiliations of a whipping, accept them, how they buried them, but afterwards dug them up—how they changed their entire racing crew, and challenged us to row again immediately—how we responded, that, after so much hard work we felt inclined to have some fun, but that in October we would be very happy to beat them again—and how we did it.

I shall never forget the gush of triumph which filled every vein in my body with happiness as we came home past the judges' boat one good eighth of a mile. I shall never forget the feeling of triumph which came from the beating of my oar, my abstinence and blood-blisters, which endured with a feeling of certainty that, in the words of the homely proverb, "I would have sweated my labour for my pains" that we would be awfully disappointed if we did not win. My feelings for a short time after the race—say, an hour—were ecstatic. Talk about playing on "an instrument of torture!"

of ten strings"—why, I could have played that melody of joy and praise without any previous practice, and I have done so, at the "Goldstreamp's" band at the same time.—Chambers.

EXTRAORDINARY TRIAL IN FRANCE.

A SUIT has just been heard before the Civil Tribunal of the Seine, brought by a Paris cab-driver and his wife to obtain an alimentary pension from their daughter and son-in-law, the Marquis and Marquise d'Orvaulx. The plaintiff, whose name is Schumacher, is, according to her own statement, a working couple. The man is owner of the cab which he drives, while his wife, although suffering from asthma, cleans the vehicle, and occasionally groans the horses. The man has had his leg broken, and is frequently obliged to get great pain in the limb; he is also deaf and blind to other infirmities. The cab business, since the close of the Exhibition, is also described as so bad that the receipts do not cover the expenses, and the two children, a son and daughter, are both infirm. The daughter, on the other hand, is living in luxury. The rent of her apartment is 11,000*fr.* a year; her establishment comprises four servants, besides a carriage-driver. What is singular is, that the fortune was not derived from the Marquis d'Orvaulx, but belonged to the cabdriver's daughter. Catherine Schumacher until recently might have been called as belonging to the demi-monde of Paris. In 1854 she married a third-rate artist, and her fortune of a million of francs in securities, besides furniture, jewellery, &c., valued at 326,000*fr.* At that time, Jacques Marie Armand, Count de Guerry, was Duke of Nemours, and the Marquis d'Orvaulx, was a peer of France. The artist, however, died, and left eighty-eight fr. to his wife.

a pension of 2700*fr.* from his family. He, however, loved luxury, and in order to obtain it gave his name in exchange, and made the cabman's daughter the lady of his choice. He was married to her, and they had families in France. The Marquis at the same time adopted legally an illegitimate son of Catherine Schueller, conferring his name on the boy. This marriage, however, did not add to the Marquis's wealth, to the conclusion of a very eccentric life. The family of the Marquis had suffered more than almost any other from the effects of the revolution. No less than twenty-two of his relatives had been guillotined. The Marquis, however, escaped. Under the first empire the Marquis de Maubourguet was a bourgeois and entered the chambre. He was a member of the Académie des sciences and of the Académie des lettres, when the allies entered Paris, in 1814. The Marquis, by riding in the staff of the sovereigns with the Napoleonic cross of the Legion of Honour tied to his waist, had been able to escape, and was living in the madhouse. A few minutes afterwards he was thrown out of the madhouse by the populace in the Place Vendôme, and assisted to pass round the neck of the statue of Napoleon the cross of the Legion of Honour. He was then taken to the Bastille. Subsequently he was sent by the Emperor to Constantinople on a mission, the precise character of which has been the subject of much controversy.

of Westphalia, King Jerome's wife, was crossing the forest of Fontainebleau, on her way to an exilic home, the Marquis waylaid her, and robbed her of diamonds valued at 80,000 francs in gold. The Marquis was sentenced to 16 years of imprisonment. For this highway robbery he was tried on 16 June 1818, and sentenced to five years' imprisonment. He escaped to England, where he passed many years, and returned to France in 1827, where he was arrested on the occasion of a grand commemorative ceremony celebrated in the church of St. Denis on the anniversary [of the death of Louis XIV], the Marquis de Montesquieu was arrested, and sentenced to 16 years' imprisonment. The King and his Court, struck Mr. de Montesquieu in the face and knocked him down. The Cassiers Célèbres show how the Marquis, for this assault, was sentenced to 16 years' imprisonment, and 600 francs fine, and ten years' surveillance of the police. The sum now asked for by the plaintiffs was 30,000 francs. The advocate of Madame de Montesquieu now asked for 60,000 francs, and he endeavoured to show that the Schumachers were in easy circumstances, and that their mode of living was the consequence of their sordid and miserly habits. He now asked for 60,000 francs, and he had property of the value of from 50,000, to 60,000 francs, and he had the interest of 10,000 francs, and the fruits of their savings, or derived from family

The woman herself admitted that at the time she was one of the most beautiful of the pensioners at the Hotel des Invalides, so that the dinner of herself, husband, and son cost only four or five sou, while in her spare time she went to the theatre, and was able to give her son a fine education for six months. The man Schumacher does not appear to have shown much affection for his daughter, as when she was only fifteen years old, and possessing great beauty, he married her to a poor soldier, and to get her living as she could. She soon found a protector, and became the owner of a magnificent apartment in the Rue Royale. The defendants' counsel, however, said that the man Schumacher, who had always treated her parents with great kindness, had placed them in comfortable lodgings; assisted them with his money; and when her father had met with an accident, he had taken her to the surgeon. She had, besides, obtained for a brother-in-law a good situation in a public company. The counsel for Madame d'Orvaux also said that the present suit was inspired by the desire to annul her marriage and legal adoption of her son, who thus became heir to her fortune, to the exclusion of the defendants and her brother, who had said and sworn that the child was the daughter of the man with whom Madame d'Orvaux became subject to co-

FATAL ACCIDENT.—On Friday morning, at about 10 o'clock, (says the Waggon Express) a shocking accident occurred in the street of this town. A man named Cooke, met with his death. Cooke was a married man, about forty years of age, and had been employed by Mr. [?] Yesterday morning he rode for two years in looking after cattle, which he had been using for the last fortnight, and all safe. About [?] a man named Cooke, riding upon a horse, was going down the street, and [?] he managed to secure him, and so then discovered that the man was quite dead, and that the infernal, which was round the neck of the horse, had [?] the waist of the deceased, and that in being dragged through the back by the frightened animal the poor lad had been shockingly hurt. The jury returned a verdict in accordance with the facts as we have detailed them above.

ARRIVAL OF THE RANGATIRA AT ADELAIDE FROM THE ENGLISH MAIL PER AYCOVA

The Rangatira, Captain Gifford, arrived at Adelaide at 4.30 a.m. this morning, after a run of 108 hours; she experienced light head winds all the way, the upward passage occupied 100 hours.

The Aycova, Captain Pugh, left Otago at 6 p.m. on the 25th February, and experienced strong S.E. trades; she arrived at the Sound at 2 p.m. on the 19th, and was expected to leave at midnight. The English mails for Australia lay four days at Otago awaiting the arrival of the Aycova. Mr. Nelson is in charge of the mails; Mr. Cooper, purser.

PASSENGERS.
For Sydney—Messrs. Wilkie, Anderson, Cook, Advertiser, and Cook.
For Melbourne—Messrs. Jones, Leeson, Buchanan, Jeffrey, Hardy, Griffiths, Weston, McNeill, Learmonth, J. Learmonth, Smart, Captain O'Hara, and Mrs. Learmonth and two children.

FOR ADELAIDE.—Messrs. P. Malcom, Ayres, Lamb, Bennett, Davis, Burton, Leighton, Stenrod, and 13 second-class passengers.
The Rangatira arrived at the Sound at 9 p.m. on the 18th, and sailed at noon the same day.
The P. and O. steamer Nippon was totally wrecked on the 23rd January, south of Amoy. Two Europeans and eleven Chinese were drowned.

FROM JANUARY 28th TO FEBRUARY 15th.
Tranquillity is restored at Cork, after serious Fein rioting.

Seventy thousand Irishmen residing in London have presented an address of loyalty and devotion to the Queen.

The French Senate passed the Army Bill unanimously.

The Monitor states that the attitude of the Great Powers shows a concurrence in the present conciliatory and peaceful symptoms.

France has arranged with Russia for a dissolution of the Commercial Treaty with the Mecklenburg side.

Mount Vesuvius gave way during the eruption, and numerous houses have been buried.

Milkey has turned approver, and disclosed the Fein plot for the release of Burke.

Parliament re-assembled on the 14th February. Mr. Darnley introduced a bill for establishing a new tribunal for the prevention of bribery. The measure was strongly opposed.

The Government have introduced a bill for the despatch of the Hahne Corps Act in Ireland on the 18th March, 1896.

Lord Stanley is seriously indisposed, and his condition excites great uneasiness. Should he die or resign Lord Stanley is regarded as his probable successor for the Premiership.

Sir Stafford Northcote stated that the Viceroy of Egypt had effected every facility to the Abyssinian expedition.

It is rumored that President Johnson intends demanding the settlement of the Alabama claims.

Earl Russell has written a letter, in which he speaks of resigning the leadership of the Liberal, and recommends Mr. Gladstone as his successor.

Lenton has been acquitted on the charge of murder but was found guilty of high treason, and sentenced to five years' penal servitude.

Earl Mayo is mentioned as a successor to Sir John Lubbock as Viceroy of India.

In Abyssinia Sir Robert Napier started for Addis Ababa on the 14th February, for which place the majority of the Maggara advance force was en route.

Captain Napier was making rapid progress with the roads beyond Addis Ababa, and gave to the country a new lease of life.

The chief Kassa had received Major Grant, with great honors, and it was expected he would meet Sir R. Napier at Addis Ababa.

The rebels are opposing Theodore's march at Magdala, and he precipitately returned, leaving the road open. Stores were rapidly sent to the relief of the beleaguered Magdala.

News has been received from the captives, who are in good health. It is considered doubtful whether Gobarez will attack King Theodore. Advice from Zeila of date January 14th, states that King Theodore is between Waddi and Tadmah, and Magdala, and the rebels in his front. Gobarez has been close in the neighborhood, and an engagement is believed to be imminent.

Gobarez sent a friendly message to Sir R. Napier.

It is asserted, on reliable authority, that the Viceroy proposes to withdraw his garrison from his Egyptian troops from Addis Ababa, leaving only a few men at Massawa. It is said that 250 vessels have been chartered in Addis Ababa, for the "Atlantic Monthly," and a similar sum for writing thirty pages entitled "Our Young Folks," with the right of republication in English in both cases.

GENERAL SUMMARY.

LONDON, JANUARY 31.

The Australian November mails were delivered in London, via Melbourne, on the 18th, and via Southampton on the 19th January.

Her Majesty is well, and remains at Osborne in comparative retirement.

The Princess of Wales is rapidly recovering strength, and has resumed her usual avocations.

The Queen has published another book, entitled "Lovers from the Journal of Lord Lytton in the Highlands, from 1848 to 1861."

The first edition, 150,000 copies, has been already sold.

Charles Keen died on January 23rd; the Queen wrote a letter of condolence to Mrs. Keen.

Feinism is nearly quiet; the effective measures of the authorities prevented further outrages.

Burke and O'Casey have been committed.

The men who fired the powder barrel at Cheshamwell prison have been captured with other prisoners, and after examination further remanded. It is now ascertained that seven murders, with mutilation and injury to forty other persons, was the result of this outrage.

George Francis Train, on his arrival from America, was arrested as a Fenian, but has since been liberated.

A public dinner of Australian colonists now in England took place on January 25th, to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the first British settlement in Australia. Sir W. Denison was in the chair. The Duke of Buckingham was present, and in responding to the toast of the Ministry the Duke said that since the arrival of the Colonial Office had been entrusted to his care, he had not known of any question that had arisen which ought not to be settled calmly and readily, if only it was met at once and disposed of before it had time to grow into a serious grievance.

Mr. Curry, M.P., who was also present, stated that £25,000 would be placed on the estimates for the completion of an iron bridge over the Forth.

Another alteration has been made in the Postal arrangements at the instance of the Post Office authorities. The departure of the English April mail is altered from the 15th to the 24th, and then every fourth week on and after the 29th. The March mails from Sydney will be despatched one day earlier than formerly.

Mr. Childers has declined the post of Finance Minister for India.

At a Conservative dinner at Bristol, Lord Stanley stated that the Cabinet had a comprehensive education scheme which they intend to introduce—the education question is attracting much attention, and there is much speaking on the subject in provincial towns.

The Standard denies that the Viceroy of Egypt made an offer of intervention on behalf of the Abyssinian captives, but says that the Viceroy, yielding to the representations of Lord Stanley, ordered the withdrawal of a minority of his Egyptian troops from Massawa.

A terrific gale passed over England and Scotland on the 25th January which resulted in serious loss of life and property.

In Edinburgh great damage was done, and four lives were lost, through the falling of a chimney of a six-story house in Duke-street; a chimney on Holyrood Palace fell through the roof into the apartments formerly occupied by the Queen. Several fishing-boats belonging to Newhaven are missing. Nineteen vessels, chiefly brigs and schooners, wrecked on the coast of Glamorgan. Fifty-two lives, it is supposed, are lost. For miles the coast is strewn with wreck.

CONTINENTAL.

JANUARY 31.

The Monitor publishes M. Magnier's report on the financial condition of France.

On the 1st December the floating debt amounted to 336,000,000 francs. The Budget of last year shows a deficiency of 35,000,000 francs compared with the Estimates; 150,000,000 francs are necessary to reform the war material and fleet in the interest of the defence of the country; and to preserve national order he says that 187,000,000 francs ought to be devoted to that object. The report concludes by proposing a loan of 440,000,000 francs, which would meet all exigencies. The loan is to be negotiated by public subscription.

Ten French newspaper proprietors have been condemned to a fine of 1000 francs each for illegally publishing recent debates; the prosecution against another seven is abandoned.

Active preparations for war are going on throughout France.

Much jealousy and uneasiness prevail regarding the Abyssinian expedition.

Notwithstanding the friendly feelings said to have recently existed between the Governments of France and Prussia, there are indications that the old jealousy is not wholly removed.

A St. Petersburg journal announces that, while Russia claims no preponderance of power for herself, she will not suffer the arrangement of a railway of a branch line of railway in Hydrabad, a distance of 130 miles.

During the past month, 35 ships arrived at Bombay and 32 ships sailed.

Freights to the United Kingdom are as follows:—To Liverpool: Cotton and wool, 23s. 6d. to 24s. 10d. for going vessels; cotton and wool, 23s. 6d. to 24s. 10d. for return vessels; seeds, 23s. 6d. to 24s. 10d. for London; Cotton and wool, and seeds, rates nominal.
